IRAN EXECUTES NUCLEAR SCIENTIST FOR SPYING FOR US

Iran has executed an Iranian nuclear scientist detained in 2010 when he returned home from the United States, after a court convicted him of spying for Washington, a spokesman for the judiciary said on Sunday. "Through his connection with the United States, [Shahram] Amiri gave vital information about the country to the enemy," Gholam-Hossein Mohseni-Ejei told a weekly news conference, state news agency IRNA reported. Mohseni-Ejei said a court had sentenced Amiri to death and the sentence had been upheld by Iran's supreme court, IRNA said. REUTERS

ISLAMIC STATE CLAIMS CAPTURE OF US WEAPONS IN AFGHANISTAN

2 Militants linked to Islamic State have released photos that purport to show weapons and equipment that belonged to American soldiers and were captured by the group in eastern Afghanistan. The photos, which came to light on Saturday, show an American portable rocket launcher, radio, grenades and other gear not commonly used by Afghan troops, as well as close-up views of identification cards for a U.S. Army soldier, Spc. Ryan Larson. The U.S. military command in Kabul denied any suggestion the soldier had been captured, saying he "has been accounted for and remains in a duty status within his unit." American special operations troops have been fighting alongside Afghan forces in a renewed offensive against militants who claim allegiance to Islamic State in Nangarhar Province, which borders Pakistan. ## CUBA BLAMES US OPEN DOOR FOR MIGRANT SURGE

3 Havana blamed Washington for a surge of Cubans trying to reach the U.S. by land and sea, accusing the Obama administration of encouraging illegal and unsafe immigration. Tens of thousands of Cubans over the last two years have flocked to the border and taken to the sea in hopes of reaching Florida, fearing a growing detente between the Cold War foes will lead to a change in U.S. policy. Under a 1960s law, the Cuban Adjustment Act, the Communist-run country's citizens are treated as legal immigrants if they set foot on U.S. soil, while migrants from any other land are considered illegal. A government statement carried by media and announcing the arrival of 14 Cubans deported by Colombia, said they were the "victims of the politicization of the migration issue by the U.S. government which stimulates illegal and unsafe immigration." A heat wave will be descending on the Northeast later this week, making subway travel uncomfortable. GETTY IMAGES

NEXT HEAT WAVE ON DECK

Bolaris' Weather Watch

JOHN BOLARIS
@weathersavior

Temperatures remained very warm Sunday with a few locations kissing 90 degrees in the Northeast, but it didn't feel that way because of a drop in humidity. As the saying goes, "It's not the heat, it's the humidity."

You should be able to lighten up on your deodorant Monday and Tuesday as humidity levels will remain lower. Your subway ride will feel a bit more pleasant. There's nothing worse than being squeezed in like human sardines on a hot summer day and the air conditioning goes on the blink.

So enjoy it while it lasts because the heat and humidity will make a big-time comeback for the second half of this week, and could last through the weekend.

The humidity will arrive Wednesday, along with scattered showers and thunderstorms, with temperatures in the 80s from Philly and New York City to Boston.

The heat wave will commence on Thursday, with temperatures soaring into the 90s along with a ton of humidity all along the Interstate 95 corridor.

The big question is, just how hot and just how far north will the heat penetrate? Philadelphia and New York City should be full-on into it and a couple of models extend it into New England as well. The other question is, just how widespread will storms become by this weekend?

Right now, my thinking is it should be quite stormy this weekend, especially on Sunday. This will put somewhat of a lid on the temperature surge, but the humidity levels will put us in the steam-bath category. Whether we hit 90 or above through the weekend, or a couple of notches below, it's just a matter of semantics.

Philadelphia

Today: Sunshine and warm, low humidity, High 87

Tuesday: Golden sun, High 86

Wednesday: Humidity jumps, scattered storms, High 88

Weekend

Saturday: Hot, humid, storm's likely, High 91

Sunday: Humid, storms, High 90

BEEN INJURED?

AUTO ACCIDENTS • SEPTA ACCIDENTS • LIQUOR LIABILITY • MEDICAL MALPRACTICE

Did You Know?

Dram Shop (liquor liability) laws hold servers of alcoholic beverages legally responsible for harm that visibly intoxicated patrons cause to others. State liquor liability laws can apply not only to bars, liquor stores and restaurants, but also to social clubs and private events where liquor is served. The laws also include selling liquor without a license, selling liquor after hours and selling liquor to minors.

If a person is served alcoholic beverages while visibly intoxicated, and then gets into an accident injuring someone while driving drunk, the owner of the serving establishment can be held responsible in addition to the drunk driver.

Dram Shop (liquor liability) lawsuits aren't limited to auto accidents — if a bar serves a visibly intoxicated person who then starts a fistfight and seriously injures another patron, that patron could sue the bar under the Dram Shop (liquor liability) law.

In order to successfully sue under the Dram Shop (liquor liability) law, you must be able to prove:

1. An employee of an establishment served alcohol to someone at a time that that person was visibly intoxicated and,
2. The business or host's decision to serve alcohol to the visibly intoxicated person directly led to the injuries.

If you feel that you or a loved one have been injured as a result of a Dram Shop (liquor liability) violation, call us at (215) 569-1212 to explore whether you may have the right to recover full compensation for your injuries.

Get a rare peek into Philly's Mormon Temple (if only for a limited time)

Nearly five years after breaking ground, the public will finally get a glimpse at the area's first Mormon Temple.

ALEXIS SACHDEV
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

Nearly eight years after plans were announced for its construction, Philadelphia's first Mormon Temple will open to the public next week — though only for a limited time.

From Wednesday through Sept. 9, the newly finished and ornately decorated temple will offer tours until its dedication ceremony on Sept. 18, when it officially closes its doors, except to members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who are in good standing.

The palatial place of worship, at 1739 Vine Street, rose at four stories over Logan Square during the five years it took to build. Ascending to higher floors, each becomes more opulent in its decor and architecture than the last.

What remains a constant is the temple's homage to 18th century Pennsylvania, a period of time Elder Larry Wilson says was pivotal to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Guiding members of the media Friday through the temple's myriad rooms, Elder Wilson said the church sought to use the best materials and highest-quality craftsmanship in its construction, much like Solomon's Temple.

But many of its influences came from some of Philly's most famous buildings: the Franklin Institute, Independence Hall and the Cathedral Basilica of Saints Peter and Paul. Others come from Pennsylvania's natural flora and fauna.

Throughout, visitors will see Pennsylvania's state flower, the mountain laurel, depicted in wrought iron and carpet patterns. Colonial color schemes — French blue and daffodil — dominate, and refined Federal-style furniture with flared arms and dark-stained wood fill each room. Windowsills slope downward, much like they do in Independence Hall. Tiles are laid at a 45-degree angle, as was the Colonial style. And they have even recreated a massive crystal chandelier from Independence Hall, which now hangs in the Temple's holiest area: the Celestial Room.

Elder Wilson said these details, though seemingly subtle, were put in place to honor the founding of the country. Other scenes honor the establishment of their faith.

Northeastern Pennsylvania is an area steeped in history for Latter-day Saints. Prophet Joseph Smith translated the church's Book of Mormon in Oakland Township. That's also where John the Baptist appeared as an angel to bestow priesthood on Smith and Oliver Cowdery in 1829, according to church doctrine.

The very first baptism for the church was performed in the Susquehanna River, a scene depicted in a floor-to-ceiling mural in the temple's Baptismal Font, where baptisms take place in a pool perched on the backs of 12 brass-coated oxen statues.

The 61,466-square-foot place of worship is the first Mormon Temple in Pennsylvania, and the 152nd operating Temple worldwide.

Tours are available Monday through Saturday for free, though reservations are recommended. Reservations can be made at Philadelphiamormontemple.org or by calling 1-855-537-2000.

BRIEFS

Family identified in Pennsylvania murder-suicide that left five dead

The five people who died in a murder suicide in Pennsylvania over the weekend were identified as two parents and their three children, all of whom were shot to death, a local district attorney said on Sunday.

The parents in the incident that took place in Sinking Spring, some 60 miles east of the state capital Harrisburg, were identified as Mark and Megan Short. The three children were not named, the Berks County District Attorney's office said in an official Facebook post. (www.facebook.com/BerksDA/)

The district attorney said there was a note left at the scene but did not elaborate on its contents. Media reports said the family was having financial trouble because it needed to purchase costly medication for a baby who had to have a heart transplant.

"This is an apparent tragic domestic incident," the district attorney's office said, adding there had been domestic issues between the husband and wife.

It added a handgun was found at the scene near one of the adults and that the family's dog was also shot to death.

The Reading Eagle, a local newspaper, said this weekend it published a story about the family in 2014 after its newest member, a then five-month-old girl named Willow, had received a heart transplant.

It also said the family was featured in a 2015 New York Times article discussing the difficulties it was facing in obtaining and using the medication Willow needed to keep her from rejecting her transplanted heart. REUTERS

An adult diamond python snake, like the one that was stolen. WIKIMEDIA COMMONS/PETER ELLIS

Brazen thief bags diamond python worth $375

Four-foot snake isn't venomous, but its bite can be dangerous to humans, experts warn.

sam.newhouse@metro.us

Police in a Montgomery County town were on the trail of a thief who walked into a pet store and stole a snake valued at $375 out of its terrarium.

Surveillance footage shows a thief entering Natural Pet Store on Dekalb Pike in East Norriton Township on Saturday afternoon, clipping open a cage and removing a 4-foot-long yellow diamond python snake, CBS3 reported.

The theft occurred around 4:30 p.m. Saturday, while the store was open. The suspect, who was with an accomplice, walked up to the snake's glass case, clipped the lock, took the reptile out and placed it in his bag before leaving, 6ABC said.

Police are asking for the public's help if they have any information regarding the theft. It was unclear if the thief wanted to sell the snake or is just an amateur herpetologist who was looking for a new pet.

While diamond pythons are not venomous, they can be dangerous to humans, as they can inflict a powerful bite and sometimes leave their teeth in the flesh of their victim, according to wildlife experts.

Passenger dies aboard Delta flight to PHL

A Delta Airlines passenger traveling from Paris to Philadelphia died mid-flight Saturday, officials announced.

The passenger was declared dead upon the flight's arrival around 4 p.m. Saturday, said Mary Flannery, spokesperson for the Philadelphia International Airport. Delta Flight 79 originated in Paris' Charles de Gaulle Airport.

"This isn't the first time, but it isn't common at all," Flannery told the Philadelphia Inquirer of a passenger arriving to PHL unresponsive.

Tinicum Township police and the Delaware County Medical Examiner responded to the scene. Officials have said they don't believe the death was suspicious, NBC10 reported.

Kathleen Kane criminal trial expected to start Monday

The state's highest court rejected the attorney general's last-minute effort to delay her perjury trial.

CRISTABELLE TUMOLA

Jury selection is slated to begin Monday in the criminal trial of Attorney General Kathleen Kane after the Pennsylvania Supreme Court refused to intervene in the case.

Kane is charged with perjury, obstruction, official oppression and other crimes, according to Philly.com, after leaking grand jury material and lying about it under oath. The state's highest court reportedly denied her emergency petition to have those charges dropped.

Her claim hinged on the grand jury that investigated her, arguing that it was unlawful and unconstitutional, The Associated Press reported. She also reportedly argued that the special prosecutor appointed to investigate the case and run the grand jury did not have the authority to do so.

Kane, a Democrat, is not running for a second term as attorney general.

One UN peacekeeper killed, four wounded in north Mali mine attack

The attack on the vehicle, which was escorting a logistical convoy, occurred about 7 miles south of Aguelhoc in the region of Kidal, where several Islamist militant groups are active, the mission said in a statement.

A United Nations peacekeeper was killed and four others wounded on Sunday when their vehicle hit a mine in Mali's restive north, the U.N. mission (MINUSMA) said.

The attack on the vehicle, which was escorting a logistical convoy, occurred about 7 miles south of Aguelhoc in the region of Kidal, where several Islamist militant groups are active, the mission said in a statement.

About two hours later, another mine exploded near a U.N. peacekeeping vehicle a little more than a mile east of the mission base in Kidal but only caused material damage, the MINUSMA statement added.

Mali's government has not had a military presence in Kidal since clashes between the army and Tuareg rebels killed 50 soldiers there in 2014, leaving a heavy security burden on U.N. troops.

Mali has become the deadliest place to serve for U.N. peacekeepers. The United Nations says more than 100 peacekeepers have been killed since MINUSMA deployed in July 2013. The U.N. Security Council voted in June to increase the contingent by 2,500 troops, taking the total number of uniformed personnel to more than 15,000.

All five peacekeepers were from Chad, a mission spokesman said.
GETTY IMAGES

In May, five Chadian peacekeepers were killed in an ambush near Kidal. Al Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM) also claimed responsibility for an attack that month that killed a Chinese peacekeeper and three civilians.

Islamist militant groups, some with links to al Qaeda, hijacked a Tuareg uprising in 2012 and seized northern Mali until a French-led intervention drove them back a year later.

But the region has remained plagued by violence despite a peace accord signed last year between Tuareg fighters and the government. Two days of fighting last month between Tuareg rebels and pro-government militia killed up to 20 people last month.

Donald Trump backers downplay rough week

A Washington Post-ABC News poll released Sunday found Clinton leading among registered voters with 50 percent of support in the week after the Democratic Party convention where she was formally named the presidential nominee, compared to 42 percent for Trump.

Donald Trump GETTY IMAGES

Republican Donald Trump's top aides and supporters on Sunday downplayed a chaotic week in which the New York businessman was distracted from his core message by personal spats, as a new poll showed him trailing Democrat Hillary Clinton.

"Everyone should calm down about it," Trump adviser Rudy Giuliani, the former New York mayor, told ABC News on Sunday. "There is certainly every opportunity for Trump to win this election."

A Reuters/Ipsos poll released on Friday showed the race closer, with Clinton leading by 3 percentage points. The poll had a credibility interval of plus or minus 3 percentage points, meaning the results showed the race roughly even.

Trump backers said voters were just starting to tune into the race for the Nov. 8 election. They said Trump was back on message after a week of disputes with members of his own party and the parents of a Muslim American soldier killed in Iraq.

Those assurances came despite Trump's tendency throughout his campaign to battle his own party and make controversial remarks.

"He is very focused. He knows what he needs to do. I am confident that he's going to start doing it," Paul Manafort, Trump's campaign manager, told Fox News, denying reports that there had been an "emergency meeting" to get Trump on message.

Leaders in Trump's own party distanced themselves from his spat with Khizr and Ghazala Khan, the Gold Star parents who criticized Trump at the Democratic National Convention.

And Republicans were incensed when he initially refused to endorse House of Representatives Speaker Paul Ryan and two senators in their re-election bids. He later said he supported all three.

Former House of Representatives Speaker Newt Gingrich, a Trump backer, told Fox News the New York businessman had made mistakes, but he said Clinton had the greater error in flubbing explanations of her use of a private server while she was secretary of state from 2009-2013.

Clinton said on Friday she "short-circuited" a week earlier when she said FBI Director James Comey had said she was truthful to the American people about her email server. Comey actually contradicted many statements Clinton had made about the server.

"I'll take the week. I think she managed to trump Trump in terms of mistakes," Gingrich said.

Sen. Tim Kaine, Clinton's vice presidential running mate, defended her email answers on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"The bottom line is this: She made a mistake, and she said over and over again 'I made a mistake, and I've learned from it, and I'm going to fix it, and I apologize for it,'" Kaine said. REUTERS

Official: Chicago police may have violated policy in fatal shooting

Chicago Police Superintendent Eddie Johnson said on Saturday that videos of the police shooting of a black man in the city last month indicate three officers may have violated the department's policies.

Johnson told a news conference it was against departmental policy to fire at or into a moving car when the vehicle was the only potential use of force by a suspect, and police were taking a hard look at training and tactics following the shooting.

Authorities on Friday released videos that captured the moments before and after police shot Paul O'Neal, 18, on July 28, but not the shooting itself because a police officer's body camera was not recording. No firearms were found on O'Neal, who was shot in the back, according to police.

Police place handcuffs on Paul O'Neal, 18, after he was shot in this still image from video taken from a body camera released by Chicago police July 28, 2016.
CHICAGO POLICE DEPARTMENT HANDOUT

Johnson was named in March to lead the department, which is facing accusations of racism and a federal investigation into its practices after the city waited more than a year to release video of a separate 2014 fatal shooting by officers.

On Saturday, he said the ongoing investigation prevented him from discussing details about the O'Neal shooting.

"I was concerned by some of the things that I saw on the videos and that is why we took such a swift action that we did last week to relieve the three officers of their police powers," Johnson said.

The video footage released on Friday shows two officers firing at a stolen car driven by O'Neal after it sped past them, the car crashing into a police car and O'Neal running into a backyard where he was shot. It does not show the shooting.

Johnson said the lack of a body-camera video of the O'Neal shooting is under investigation, though he noted that the officers in that police district had the cameras for only about a week before the shooting.

Civil rights activist the Rev. Jesse Jackson said the lack of a complete video accounting of O'Neal's shooting showed a cover-up and a lawyer for O'Neal's family called for a special prosecutor to investigate the killing.

The union representing Chicago police officers urged the public not to rush to judgment. REUTERS

GOING FOR GOLD

The torch is aflame, Zika fears are rampant and the Olympics are underway. Personally, I'm hoping the games will distract me from all the rough and tumble here in D.C. for a while, but I'm not counting on it. Here are three things to watch in politics this week.

1. HAMMER THROW
A little coaching advice for Hillary Clinton: Grab your email controversy, spin around and throw it as far away as possible. And never mention it again. The Democratic nominee seems hell bent on proving she did nothing wrong with her email practices, despite an FBI investigation which found precisely the opposite. Clinton's repeated false statements about the matter are only reinforcing her worst problem: Most voters don't trust her. Let's see if she figures that out and does what she should have done from the start — take the blame, fully accept the findings and quit talking about it.

2. WEIGHT LIFTING
Last week was horrible for Republican nominee Donald Trump. Clinton came out of her convention with a big bounce in the polls, and a series of missteps sent his support plummeting. Now he has to haul those numbers back into close contention. And as much as it may pain Trump, that means he'll have to get cozier with mainstream GOPers and quit raising claims he can't back when challenged. In other words, he has to show more discipline while not losing the anti-establishment, "I say what I think" vibe that has made him into a political phenomenon.

3. TEAM SLOVENIA
Is Melania Trump's immigration record a problem for her husband? That's not clear yet. But Democrats are crowing over discrepancies in her "coming to America" story which suggest a possible violation of immigration laws. Watch for Dems to pound the issue, if only to distract Trump. Meanwhile, it all revolves (no kidding) around some nude photos on the internet of the wannabe first lady which ... um ... wait, what was I saying?

TOM FOREMAN

CNN's Tom Foreman is the author of the book "My Year of Running Dangerously."

Is Ben Affleck back to being a hot mess?

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

To the untrained eye, it appears Ben Affleck was channeling his inner Britney 2007 over the weekend. But not so fast, says a friend. Despite leaving a "Suicide Squad" premiere with his zipper down and shirt tucked into his belt, we're to believe that Affleck — who remains estranged from wife Jennifer Garner because the world is a vampire and everything you know about love is a lie — has things under control. "That picture is outside another small after-after-party," the source tells Page Six. "It was very late at night. He's not off the rails. It looked a lot worse than it was." We're rooting for you, Ben — but if you shave your head, we're calling your mom. MONICA WEYMOUTH

Lindsay Lohan speaks out about Egor Tarabasov

After weeks of social media drama, Lindsay Lohan, patron saint of The Word, is officially speaking out about her troubled relationship with fiance Egor Tarabasov. In an interview with the Daily Mail, Lohan claims that the 23-year-old Russian billionaire is abusive, and that recent footage of what appears to be a physical altercation between the two is not an isolated incident. "I wanted to do this interview because it's time to tell the truth," she says. "I've kept quiet for so long but now I'm scared of what Egor might do to me and to himself." For the moment, she's thankfully safe with friends and taking it easy: "I've been meditating and swimming in the ocean and listening to George Michael's song, 'Faith.' The lyrics are very apt.'" # Frank Ocean ruins weekends

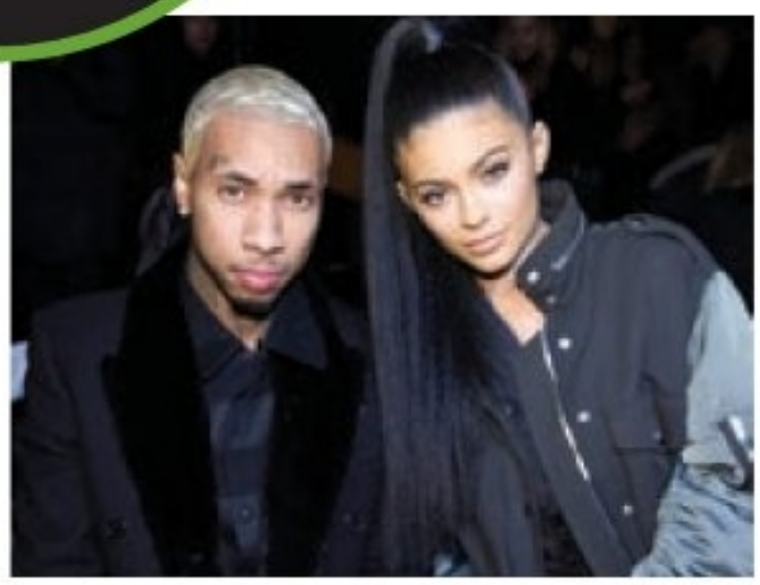
Despite rumors substantiated by no less than The New York Times, Frank Ocean did not release his follow up to 2012's "Channel Orange" on Friday as most thought. This sent millions of fans to a weekend spent feverishly refreshing his website (and Twitter) in hopes of further details regarding his new album, reportedly titled, "Boys Don't Cry."

The R&B impresario recently rebranded his personal website to align with the new album, and last Monday the site began running a video stream that featured the singer mysteriously at work on a construction project.

The site features a series of dates when the singer's next body of work might have debuted. Drama built all week, but when the clock struck midnight on Aug. 5, there was no new Frank Ocean music — only an onslaught of disappointed online memes. BRENDAN MCGURK

Tyga gives Kylie one fancy birthday present



What do you get the birthday girl who, quite literally, has it all? A Mercedes-Maybach. As documented on Snapchat, Tyga surprised newly minted 19-year-old Kylie Jenner with the luxe wheels over the weekend, a fitting follow-up to last year's Ferrari that's speculated to cost upwards of $200,000. This concludes your weekly Kardashian trolling — forgive us. MONICA WEYMOUTH

Viola Davis loves

The award-winning actress gets to play arguably the scariest person in "Suicide Squad."

matt.prigge@metro.us

There are many horror stories from the set of "Suicide Squad." For his comic book movie about a team of villains rounded up to save the world, filmmaker David Ayer ("End of Watch," "Fury") encouraged his actors to get really, really, really into character. Some took it too far: Jared Leto got so into playing the Joker that he mailed fellow cast members condoms. There was only one crazy thing Viola Davis had to do.

As Amanda Waller, the manipulative government official who created the squad, she was asked to keep calling her fellow actor Joel Kinnaman, who plays a solder, a "p—ssy."

And yet Davis, 50, couldn't have had a better time. Still reeling from reuniting with the close-knit cast for the "Suicide Squad" junket, the two-time Oscar-nominee and Emmy-winner gushes about a very unique experience.

Apart from calling Kinnaman a "p—ssy," were there other things Ayer would do to get you in character?

Besides calling him a "bitch" and a "p—ssy" [laughs], that was pretty much the height of it. But what [Ayer] constantly encouraged me to do was tap into my power and not shy away from it at all. Whenever I did something, he would say, "Nuh-uh. Louder! Harder!" It was very liberating for me. It was a great exercise in terms of tapping into my power and understanding how much further I need to go in my life.

Have you ever experienced something like this kind of production? Doing a play might be somewhat similar to this.

No. It just became a different sort of camaraderie. We had a rehearsal period of four weeks where they encouraged everyone to just go for it, to share their intimate secrets. The members of the "Suicide Squad" had sparring watches and spent a lot of time training together. We just got to know each

playing a badass

Viola Davis plays Amanda Fuller, the ruthless government official who forces a group of villains to save the world, in "Suicide Squad." WARNER BROS. PICTURES other and it created this atmosphere of safety and togetherness. By the time we started shooting we really felt like a team.

Amanda Waller can sometimes be the movie's most villainous character. But the film doesn't judge her. She's someone who thinks the ends justify the means.

Look who she had to lead! Look who she had to control! Harley Quinn, Killer Croc, who's a cannibal — you would have to be pretty badass to control them. You have to be just as ruthless as they are.

She sounds like she was fun to play.

I had a blast. I really did. I'm serious.

Even though this is a comic book movie, it does have something to say about how we treat people who are different than us.

I always go, the line I have in the movie where I talk about Killer Croc: "He grew up looking like a monster and pretty soon, people treated him like a monster. After awhile, he believed he was a monster." That's what we do to outsiders, with people we label as "those people." They begin to act like outsiders. They begin to feel like outsiders.

Given how intense the production was, was it hard to shake off?

I'm one of those actors who never has a hard time shaking off roles. But I did see this rearing its ugly head in little parts of my life. I'd have a little bit more bite to me than usual. I'd shut down a little too much, to the point where it kind of scared me. Listen, I need some laughs in my life. I have a 6-year-old. I don't think she wants to play dress-up as Amanda Waller. [Laughs]

Superstar foodie Adam Richman wants to dine with Lin-Manuel Miranda

Don't we all?

JENNIFER LOGUE
jennifer.logue@metro.us

Adam Richman quite possibly has the coolest job ever — exploring this great big planet one bite at a time. Known for food-focused shows like "Man v. Food," Richman has a new series premiering on the Travel Channel tonight. On "Secret Eats with Adam Richman," he searches for underground culinary gems from Rome to Bangkok to Mexico City. Richman tells us what it's like to eat ant larvae and why he wants to grab dinner with "Hamilton" creator Lin-Manuel Miranda.

I read that you got your start in acting. What led to your passion for food?

I have been working in the food industry since I was about 13 years old, so it was always there. I got my graduate degree from Yale in acting. My undergrad was pretty different, as well. I had an international studies and French background so I always kept pretty varied interests. I had found out about the opportunity for "Man v. Food" through the agents I signed on with out of Yale. I wouldn't have found out about the opportunity if it wasn't for them.

I also read you are a trained sushi chef.

My dad and I were going to get certification together, but my dad unfortunately passed away before we got to. So as a gift for getting into Yale my stepmom paid for me to get my training.

Well I'm sure he'd be proud of everything you've accomplished. With the new show, what's the craziest thing you ate?

Oh my gosh. I don't want to give too much away, but one thing I definitely mentioned on Instagram was escamoles, which is ant larvae. [I had it] just outside Mexico City and people love them and go crazy for them, but it didn't sit so well.

Oh no! So you weren't a fan?

Flavorwise, it doesn't really get you. It was the same day I had grasshoppers. So I think it probably was the combination of the two.

So filming this new show, was there a particularly memorable moment for you?

I don't know where to start. We just shot a special in Greenland and Iceland. I try to do something for my crew every trip. In Greenland I treated everyone to a cruise. We went among the glaciers and we actually saw a glacier calving — a huge chunk of ice fall into the sea. There's something so humbling about being around nature that's so massive and impressive that you won't see anywhere else in the world.

If you could share a meal with anyone in the world, who would it be and why?

Lin-Manuel Miranda — the guy who created "Hamilton." He is a profoundly well-read, literate individual. I admire him using his fame to lobby for the Puerto Rican debt crisis. You have to understand, for a guy who literally wrote two plays and is making a legacy out of the second one — literally a million dollars a week — is absolutely mental and that it's theater. Theater stars have become stars again, which is so cool.

"Secret Eats with Adam Richman" premieres tonight at 8 p.m. on The Travel Channel. PROVIDED

Kiehl's LifeRide for AIDS research

Since 1996, Kiehl's, the time-honored beauty brand, has been working with groups to find a cure for AIDS, and this weekend one of its biggest fundraisers helps out a local organization.

On Saturday, August 13, Kiehl's will be hosting its seventh annual Motorcycle Ride for AIDS Research outside its store at The Shops at Liberty Place. Chris Salgardo, president of Kiehl's, will be hosting, along with celebrity bikers Scott Patterson ("Gilmore Girls"), Gilles Marini ("Sex and the City the Movie"), TV host Grant Reynolds and activist Ben Cohen.

The event kicked off August 3 in New York City and goes throughout the Northeast to raise funds and awareness for The Foundation for AIDS Research. The bikers will be ending their 11-state charity ride here in Philly and to celebrate the closing of the event, a $50,000 check will be presented to Philadelphia FIGHT so it can continue its work with people living with HIV/AIDS.

The free event is open to the public and will feature food, meet and greets with the celebrity riders, complimentary facials or hand massages, and 15% discount on all Kiehl's purchases. The event will also be giving free HIV testing outside the store and an AIDS memorial quilt for guests to sign remembering those who have died from the disease.

By the end of this ride, Kiehl's will have raised $1.6 million since 2010 for AIDS research and since 2001, it has raised about $3.6 million for HIV/AIDS organizations.

HOW TO GET AHEAD

A graphic novel chronicles Rep. John Lewis’ long fight for civil rights — and it made him hit at Comic-Con.

ALIZAH SALARIO
@Alirosa
alizah.salario@metro.us

Whoever said history is dead hasn’t read Georgia Congressman John Lewis’ graphic novel trilogy “March.”

You might recall that Lewis made headlines in June for leading a sit-in on the floor of the House of Representatives to demand action on gun-control measures. The event Periscoped around the world was just the latest battle in Lewis’ nonviolent resistance and decades-long participation in the civil-rights movement — a history chronicled in the poignantly told and beautifully illustrated “March.”

Written by Congressman Lewis and his aide Andrew Aydin and illustrated by Nate Powell, this graphic novel trilogy traces Lewis’ path from his youth in rural Alabama to his rise to Congress. The story depicts how his career intersects with pivotal moments in the civil-rights movement, from the story’s opening at the Selma-to-Montgomery March in 1965 to Lewis’ first meeting with Martin Luther King Jr.

The trilogy flashes between Lewis’ memories and Obama’s 2009 inauguration, where Lewis sat in the audience, reflecting on the events that brought him to that day.

The recently released “March: Book Three” (Top Shelf Comix) focuses on Lewis’ activism during the Mississippi Freedom Summer in 1964 and the Selma campaign of 1965.

Today, the trilogy’s educational value is recognized by public schools districts throughout the nation, where it supplements traditional history texts in secondary social studies classrooms.

“I have never had to ask students to put books down before, until “March.”…They could see themselves in another time, another place. They connected to their learning in a deeper way than they had before,” says Judith Marks, an educator at Olney Charter High School in Philadelphia.

The narrative-driven story and its unabashed approach to our nation’s long civil-rights struggles makes “March” a compelling teaching tool.

Educators say the text has prompted frank discussions about race; looking at the way characters responded to racist comments, practices and restrictions helps students reflect upon their own experiences with racism and prejudice.

Though “March” aligns with key English language arts state standards, such as integrating knowledge and ideas and interpreting various forms of media, its applications are also highly personal. One educator’s guide encourages students to collect written and oral family stories from the civil-rights movement, or stories of racism and segregation, adding layers to the story depicted in the book.

Graphic novels are increasingly being used in the classroom to supplement traditional history books or autobiographies. C.M. Butzer’s “Gettysburg: The Graphic Novel” (Bowen Press/Collins, 2009) and Che Anderson’ s “King” (Fantagraphics, 2010), a biography of Martin Luther King Jr., use imagery and storytelling to depict the past. And of course, the mega-hit musical “Hamilton” has thrust history into the spotlight.

The trilogy has also made Lewis an unexpected Comic-Con hit. “March” was voted Best Reality-Based Work in 2016 at the Will Eisner Comic Industry Awards.

Key camp battles to watch for

The competition at wide receiver will be highly intriguing.

ZANE STALBERG
@MetroPhilly
sports@metro.us

Nelson Agholor registered 23 receptions last season. GETTY IMAGES

As the Philadelphia Eagles prepare for their pre-season opener on Aug. 11, they are a team in transition. They are not truly a contender, nor are they rebuilding. Rather, the organization is distancing itself from the bygone Chip Kelly era, and restructuring the roster in order to allow Doug Pederson to succeed with his own personnel. As a byproduct, Philadelphia has had a training camp rife with competition. Here are the most compelling position battles going forward:

Wide Receiver

With Jordan Matthews coming off a breakout year playing in the slot position, the biggest competition among the wide receiver group has been for playing time on the outside. On one hand, Reuben Randle has been praised by Pederson for his impact on and off the field. However, while Randle's production has stood out early, Chris Givens' average of 16.6 yards per catch for his career, and Nelson Agholor's flashes of brilliance will surely keep the hierarchy on the depth chart interesting as the preseason moves forward.

Running Back

Ryan Mathews is, by all accounts, going to be the starting running back for the Eagles in 2016. However, the 28-year-old has been hampered by injuries for his entire career, including a groin injury that slowed him in 2015, and a sprained ankle that he suffered trying to prepare for training camp this year. Considering that Mathews has only carried the ball at least 200 times twice in his career Pederson will likely be paying close attention to the other options in his backfield, such as Darren Sproles, Wendell Smallwood, and Kenjon Barner.

Cornerback

In all likelihood, Leodis McKelvin will occupy one of the starting cornerback spots. The veteran cornerback provides Philadelphia with experience, and was brought over from Buffalo by Jim Schwartz. What is truly interesting is whether Eric Rowe, who fought his way into a starting spot last year, can earn that spot once more against Nolan Carroll, who is a veteran corner playing on a one-year contract. Beyond that, it will be intriguing to see if rookie Jalen Mills can keep up the production that has been turning heads at camp, and steal some playing time.

Defensive End

Connor Barwin, who had seven sacks last year, has been the presumptive starter at this position for some time. However, Brandon Graham is the better fit as a 4-3 end. With Barwin and Graham likely to split snaps under Schwartz, it will be interesting to see if Graham can overtake Barwin, who may be starting to decline as he ages, and get the bulk of the playing time.

Kicker

After losing Cody Parkey to injury in 2015, the Eagles signed Caleb Sturgis to replace him. And while Parkey showed real promise in making the Pro Bowl at the kicker position early in his career, Sturgis rebounded after a rocky start to 2015, and finished strong, making this one of the closest battles on the depth chart.

Phils have taken positive step forward this season

The Phils are on pace for 73 wins.

KYLE PHILLIPPI
@MetroPhilly
sports@metro.us

Cameron Rupp and the Phillies are in solid position to do real damage next season. GETTY IMAGES

The Phillies' 2016 season hasn't been the prettiest thing to watch, but it's certainly been a step in the right direction.

Looking around the league, the team finds itself not at the bottom like last season, but on the cusp of the top 20 teams in baseball. Now that's nothing to be proud about, but again, this is a team that finished dead last a year ago with just 63 wins. The Phillies find themselves with more wins than the Los Angeles Angels, Oakland Athletics and Tampa Bay Rays — all of which are pretty talented organizations that hit a rut. Even the defending World Series champion Kansas City has just one more win than the Phillies.

As a team, Philadelphia is 13 wins away from what it had last season, with 53 games to go. For comparison, over their last 53 games, the Phillies have gone 23-30. If they finish the season on that pace, they would finish with a 73-89 record — a 10-win improvement. As of now, that definitely seems likely. The Phillies have been winning some tough games, none more so than last Wednesday's 12-inning thriller.

"That was huge for us," said catcher Cameron Rupp. "For us to battle back … and hit those home runs to win, it's huge."

It's a victory like that, a highlight of their recent 4-2 stretch since July 28, which gives a team confidence down the stretch. While they won't necessarily have much to play for with them being a distant eight games out of the final wild card spot, they'll continue to be a pesky team for opposing clubs. Take last year, for example, when they strung together a surprise sweep of the New York Mets in their second to last series or when they took two of four games against the Chicago Cubs early in September.

This year's ball club appears to be in better shape than a year ago and prospects like Jake Thompson and J.P. Crawford should start getting their names called. Once that happens, it'll serve almost as a spark plug, the same way the team responded when Tommy Joseph was called up — winning four of the first six games afterward — and more recently Zach Eflin, who saw the team win in five of his first seven starts with two of those being no-decisions on his end.

It may not seem like it, but the Phillies' 2016 season campaign has gone just as planned, and that in itself is a victory. Playoffs were never truly a realistic option despite their early season success, but the most important thing about this season was going to be progress, and right now, there's been plenty of that. And it looks as though the final two months of the season should be an entertaining one with plenty of optimism around the clubhouse.

metro.us/horoscopes

Aries Your instinct will be to act fast, but if you take a moment to think matters through and plan carefully, you will spare yourself a lot of grief.

Taurus You should participate in any group conversation or prospect that looks interesting. A take-charge attitude will help position you for advancement. Love and romance are in the stars.

Gemini A practical approach to whatever you do will help you stick to a budget and alleviate stress. Listen to an offer and ask questions. Avoid getting involved in an unstable situation.

Cancer Don't give in to demands or ultimatums. Deal with matters swiftly in order to have time to enjoy a few hours with someone who makes you feel good about yourself.

Leo Reconnect with old friends and colleagues. Visiting an old hangout will help resolve an emotional matter that has been holding you back. An investment will help your situation.

Virgo Discuss your plans with anyone affected by your decisions. Anger will solve nothing, but incorporating others' suggestions will help you avoid opposition. Offer incentives and rewards.

Libra Try something different, new and exciting. It will give you the pick-me-up you need, and will provide some ideas that will encourage personal or professional changes.

Scorpio Consider every angle before you start something new. A partnership with someone who has as much to bring to the table as you looks rewarding. Romance is encouraged.

Sagittarius As soon as you deviate from what you promised to do, you will be put in an awkward position. Avoid a run-in with someone with the power to make your life miserable.

Capricorn Don't let your emotions take the reins. A balanced attitude will help you get the most out of what you do. Make suggestions, but don't let anyone lean on you.

Aquarius Resolve pending issues or try for a position that you feel suits your skill set. Do your best to bring about positive change. Go after exactly what you want.

Pisces Step up your game and take care of business before someone else takes charge. You will be ridiculed if you don't do your share, but rewarded for your effort. EUGENIA LAST
